GOULD ACADEMY

In the girls' basketball tournament, the Seniors are now in the lead, having won three games and tied two. The Juniors have won two, lost two and tied one; the Sophomores, won two, lost one and tied two; while the Freshmen have tied one, losing four.

On Monday afternoon, March 6, the final games will be played off between the Seniors and Juniors and the Freshmen and Sophomores. If the Juniors and Sophomores win these games, the Seniors and Sophomores will be tied for first place in the tournament. If the Seniors win, however, they will be the undefeated champions for the season.

The first two games of the Gould Academy Interclass Tournament for boys brought to light three players who can score heavily and will bear plenty of watching in the games to follow. Littlehale gathered 19 points but it failed to overcome the Sophomores who won the opening game 30 to 25. The winners gave Young, their scoring ace, a little more help, as he manufactured 15 points. Wheeler, with 27 points, was the scoring ace for the Juniors in their 48 to 17 rout of the Freshmen.

MARY CAROLINE GOODNOW

With the death of Mary Caroline Goodnow, widow of George Goodnow, on March 1st, another landmark of an earlier era is gone from the life of the town and a noble woman has gone to her reward.

Born in Gorham, N. H., on March 9, 1852, she came to West Bethel when 15 years of age, and has spent all of a happy and useful life with in the town.

Endowed with natural beauty and high intelligence, Mrs. Goodnow was distinguished for her high-erected ideals and unheralded fidelity to duty. Her family and home were her first concern and happiness. For them her tenderness and devotion were unbounded.

The leisure that came to her with the passing years, the sunset days of a busy life, was happily used in reading, thus keeping abreast of modern times. Her mind was keen and her interests many.

Since a fall of three years ago she has been confined to a wheel chair. A granddaughter, Mrs. Frank Hale, with her husband and sons, have shared the old farm home for the past five years, and tenderly cared for Mrs. Goodnow. She is survived by eight grandchildren, 12 great-grandchildren, and one great-great-grandchild. Funeral services will be at the Union Church in West Bethel on Friday afternoon. Burial will be in West Bethel Flat Cemetery.

We may truly say of this fine woman that she awoke each morning with a smile on her face; she approached her work with reverence and her Maker with faith. She was ever gentle, kind and courteous and spent, well and wisely, a long life.

H. L. Jackson, superintendent of the Norway district of the Central Maine Power Co., will be the speaker at the meeting of the Bethel Chamber of Commerce next Tuesday evening.

BUDGET COMMITTEE WOULD CUT EXPENSES

Advise $2,400 Less Than Last Year—Reports Show Town in Good Shape—No Contests

Next Monday forenoon promises to be a quiet affair at Odeon Hall when the Bethel voters choose their officers for the next 12 months. So far as the printed ballot goes, no contests are indicated, so it is likely that the results are fairly certain before hand. The uncertainty, if any, will lie in the choice of selectmen, assessors and overseers of the poor. These gentlemen, all running for reelection, are expected to take office as first, second, and third, according to the number of votes received.

At the budget meeting Saturday afternoon the recommendations totaled over $2,400 less than planned last year, the biggest slash coming in school accounts where $1,700 was cut. The committee would not commit themselves on the articles relating to public health work, superintendent's clerk, and advertising the town.

The annual reports, issued last week, show the town's condition to be excellent. This year's books are smaller than last year's, but the information as to town expenditures and work is well presented. Here are a few figures from the report:

COLUMBUS P. KIMBALL

The many friends of Columbus P. Kimball were saddened to learn of his death, which occurred at his home in Bryant Pond Sunday evening, after being in poor health for some time.

Mr. Kimball was born in Woodstock, Jan. 23, 1862, the son of Benjamin and Narcissa Perham Kimball. On Sept. 26, 1887, he was married to Miss Dora Bell York, who passed away Sept. 9, 1937. For 35 years Mr. Kimball lived in Berlin, where he was employed by the Brown Company, and in 1923 he moved to Bryant Pond and built a new home on the Rumford road. He served as treasurer of the town of Woodstock for several years. He was a Mason, a member of Franklin Grange of Bryant Pond and the Congregational Church at Berlin.

Mr. Kimball was a lover of flowers and had a very good vegetable and flower garden each year. He was a friend to all and will be greatly missed by the people in the community in which he lived. He is survived by a sister, Mrs. Martha Kimball Dudley of Bryant Pond, and several nephews and nieces.

Funeral services were held at the Baptist Church, Bryant Pond, Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The remains were placed in the tomb at Lakeside cemetery and interment will take place in the spring.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

YOUR CAMERA LENS

A camera with an anastigmat lens, f.8.3 or faster, is a great help in obtaining clear, sharp indoor pictures such as this.

TAKING first-rate snapshots requires good eyes. One is your "eye for pictures," your ability to recognize a picture when you see it. The other is your camera's "eye"—its lens.

You can train your "eye for pictures." The more snapshots you take, the better you learn to see a picture chance when it confronts you. But, once you have chosen a subject, it is up to your camera's "eye" to record it clearly and sharply.

Lenses on most box type or fixed-focus cameras are remarkably good, at the price. But the finest camera lenses are known as "anastigmats." They are fast—let in a greater amount of light than the ordinary lens—enabling you to take pictures under adverse conditions, on dull days and at night. And they produce negatives with needle-sharp detail over the entire picture area. Negatives made with anastigmat lenses yield splendid enlargements.

The word "anastigmat" is usually stamped on the mounting of these lenses. It is something like the "Sterling" mark on silver. Actually it means "free from astigmatism." The speed of the lens is also indicated, in the form of an "f-number," such as f.6.3, f.4.5 or f.2.

This speed is important. An f.6.3 anastigmat lens is four or five times as fast as the average box-camera lens. This extra speed makes snapshots possible in dull weather, and with small photo bulbs at night.
Again, an f.4.5 anastigmat lens is twice as fast as the f.6.3. And on the better-grade miniature cameras, one finds fast lenses rated at f.3.5 or f.2—so fast that they take snapshots at night by ordinary room light, when the camera is loaded with high speed film.

The smaller the "f-number," the faster the lens. Always remember this, when you examine a camera.
And when you get a finer camera, with fast lens, treat the lens as carefully as you would a jewel. Don't smear it with fingerprints; clean it occasionally with a soft lintless cloth.
If you treat your camera's lens well, it will repay you with many better pictures.

MRS. EFFIE E. BROOKS

Mrs. Effie E. Brooks was born at Yarmouth, Maine, May 10, 1884, the daughter of William J. and Mary Josephine (Kenny) Mills, and answered the Master's call to "Come up higher" from her home in Bethel, Maine, on February 21, 1939.

Her early life was spent in her native town, where she received her education. She attended North Yarmouth Academy, and during her course there acted as supply teacher in Mathematics. She was fond of music and before her marriage devoted much time to a study of it—both instrumental and vocal.
During her girlhood, B. Fay Mills, the noted evangelist, conducted a series of meetings at Yarmouth, at which time she was converted and united with the Baptist Church, and remained true to the "Faith" until she was translated to her Heavenly home.

On October 1, 1902 she was united in marriage to Dalphon S. Brooks, also of Yarmouth, and who was at that time engaged in a business career. To this union were born eight children,—Ambrose W., Irving C., Lester E., who died in infancy, Stanley W., who passed away a year ago, Victor V., Charles J., Earl R., and Ruthetta E.,—the three youngest still living at home.

In 1906 Mr. Brooks entered the ministry and served churches in Gorham, Newfield, and North Yarmouth, Maine, and Intervale, Jackson, and Glen, New Hampshire. In all these churches Mrs. Brooks shared with her preacher-husband the joys, problems, cares and responsibilities of the Christian ministry and parsonage life. She was a faithful worker and did her part well. Later Mr. Brooks gave up the active ministry and a few years ago settled in Bethel. During all these years Mrs. Brooks has been a loyal helpmate, a faithful wife, and a loving mother.

Soon after the death of her son, Stanley, Mrs. Brooks was taken ill with what proved to be her final sickness. For months she has borne patiently and with Christian fortitude the ravages of disease, hoping to the last that she might be restored to health and permitted once more to carry on the activities of life. God, however, willed it otherwise, and when the end came peacefully released her spirit from the tenement of clay to take up residence with him in the Father's house of many mansions.

She is survived by her husband, the five sons and daughter mentioned above, and a large circle of other relatives and friends, by

Isle of Dogs Not Island

The Isle of Dogs, in London is a district of Poplar, surrounded on three sides by the Thames; it is principally docks, says London Answers Magazine. Where it got its name is a bit of a mystery. Some authorities suggest that it was so "christened" because the Royal kennels were situated there in the Seventeenth century. Others say that "dogs" is just a corruption of "docks."

Discovered Laws of Heredity

Back in 1860 an Austrian monk, named Mendel, discovered nature's laws of heredity. His discovery was made while working with common garden peas, and the principles of heredity he discovered were found to be applicable throughout the plant and animal kingdoms. The papers he wrote on the subject, known as "The Mendelian Theory of Heredity," were misplaced and came to light only in 1900.

WOODSTOCK HIGH GIVEN DOUBLE DEFEAT

Showing a complete reversal of form the Gould second team upset Bryant Pond to the tune of 24 to 20. The game was well played and hard fought on both sides. The sharp shooting of Wilbur Bull, who connected for 12 points proved the deciding factor in the game.

Gould had much the better of the argument as far as field goals were concerned with an 11 to 6 advantage in shots made. Woodstock, however, kept themselves in the running by sinking eight out of 13 free throws awarded them by 11 fouls committed by Gould. The visitors committed nine fouls but the local boys could only sink two shots.

LISTEN TO THIS

By TOM FIZDALE

Water Over the Dam: Just 52 columns ago we launched Listen To This with a handful of papers willing to give us a trial. A year later we are on the staff of more than 1,000 leading newspapers from coast-to-coast.

That first column welcomed back to the air, after a six months' vacation, beautiful Joan Blaine, starring in her new daily drama, Valiant Lady. Miss Blaine is still going strong and the popularity of the show has lived up to our prediction.

Fibber McGee and Company were just getting ready to switch to their present Tuesday night spot on NBC-Red. They're still there, but heard from Hollywood instead of Chicago. Incidentally, Fibber now has the greatest listening audience in his history.

Orson Welles was hiding his light under a mask as "The Shadow." Today he is the "man of the year" in radio and his Friday CBS Playhouse presentations are hailed as a dramatic high-spot of the week. Dynamic, youthful, touched with genius, Welles is one of the really great new names of the theatre and air.

Eddie Cantor was originating his broadcasts in New York for a few weeks. Cantor is back on the coast now under the aegis of the same sponsor as Benny Goodman and is continuing to do the pioneering in showmanship that has made him famous.

Cantor's former sponsor, who now brings us that top-flight Star Theatre each Wednesday with Ken Murray, Frances Langford, Kenny Baker, Charlie Ruggles, David Broome, and music and Bill Bacher's swell drama, welcomed him back for a guest appearance a few weeks ago.

Orson Welles
Touched With Genius

A year ago, Barbara Luddy, popular star of these First Nighter dramas, had decided that hard work agreed with her. She was working in a daytime serial in addition to her Friday night show, to which she is now devoting all of her talents.

The sponsor of her former daydrama now brings us the lovable antics of Tommy Riggs and Betty Lou, with Larry Clinton's orchestra, each Saturday night and the adventures of glamorous Betty Winkler in that fast moving Girl Alone series each week-day.

Water over the dam—yes—but most of the favorites of 52 columns ago are still the favorites of today. Gracie Allen continues to babble her way into the hearts of listeners; Bing Crosby, Charlie McCarthy, Jack Benny, Rudy Vallee and all of the favorites we have previously mentioned, continue to go along as usual.

Rosalind Russell
She Crochets, Too

Pretty Rosalind Russell, whom you've heard guesting on various programs, is being eyed for a series unless this current picture-radio feud interferes.

WHY

Corn and Some Other Plants Grow Faster at Night

Other things being equal, corn probably grows most rapidly on warm nights. Many plants, including corn or maize, continue to grow after dark, notwithstanding the fact that photosynthesis takes place only while the plants are receiving sunlight.

The rate of growth in plants, says the United States bureau of plant industry, is influenced by many factors other than the formation of food materials through photosynthesis, and the photosynthetic products themselves may require further change before being utilized in growth. Thus it happens that some plants not only continue to grow after nightfall, but grow more rapidly at night under ordinary conditions than they do during the day. Apparently, however, this is not true of all plants.

There is no particular period in the course of 24 hours of the day during which all plants grow most rapidly. Even among those that reach their maximum rate of growth in the night, the period of most rapid growth in some species seems to begin in the early part of the night, while in other species it does not begin until after midnight. Certain plants will continue to elongate rapidly even in prolonged darkness, but in such cases the type of growth differs materially from that which takes place when the plants are exposed to sunlight.

Why City of Washington Has No J, X, Y or Z Sts.

Many visitors to the national capital cannot quite get over the fact that there is no "J" street. They travel on "G," "H" and "I," but the next one is "K." What happened to "J"? Official records show no reason for this slighting of the letter "J."

Some persons claim that letter was left out of the street alphabet because in the old days the letter "I" was written very much like a "J" and the latter was left out to avoid confusion. Anyway there never has been a "J" street in the capital, although there is a "Jay" street, named after John Jay, first chief justice of the United States Supreme court.

As a matter of fact, says Pathfinder Magazine, there are no X, Y and Z streets in Washington. Various reasons are offered to explain why these three letters of the alphabet were skipped in naming streets. Some claim it was because these letters were too closely identified with mathematics, especially the unknown quantity. But whatever the reason, the fact remains that even in the second, third and fourth alphabets of streets are only two of these three letters recognized—X in Xenia street and Y in Yuma street.

Soil Heating With Electricity Is Both Profitable and Simple

Ease of construction is only one advantage of the electric hotbed.

By IRA MILLER
Rural Electrification Bureau

TRUCK gardeners, florists and commercial growers who wish to "hit" the market when prices are highest do not have to place their entire dependence on nature and natural means alone for the early germination and growth of their seedlings. Instead, more and more each season they are turning to the electrical heating of hotbeds—a method used in Norway and Sweden for 20 years but which came into prominence in this country only about eight years ago with the development of special metallic-sheathed cable.

Although steam, hot water and hot air are used to some extent to heat hotbeds, manure long has been the common heating medium. However, all of those methods lack some of the following advantages of electricity: Less labor required to construct and operate; temperature automatically controlled within narrow limits; cheaper, if labor and supervision costs are included; free from harmful and obnoxious fumes; less danger of soil contamination; beds need not be recharged each time they are used, only a turn of a switch being necessary to start each run; plants are produced in less time; temperatures easily changed to force or retard plant growth as conditions require; may be used to produce garden truck for out-of-season home markets; equipment lasts for years; and clean and agreeable to work.

For growing truck garden plants, electric hotbeds are superior to greenhouses because their initial cost is much less; extra cold frames are not needed for hardening plants for transplanting; it is not necessary to use "flats"; less labor is required; and they are cheaper to operate, unless the greenhouse is used for other purposes.

When used to furnish bottom heat in propagating benches in greenhouses, electricity has the following advantages: Maintenance of constant soil temperature best suited for the cuttings being rooted; soil easily maintained at temperatures higher than the air—a condition conducive to rooting of cuttings; higher percentage of cuttings take root; they root in much shorter time; and no danger of overheating.

Full information on the construction, installation, operation and cost of electric hotbeds may be obtained without charge from your state college or university, or from the manufacturers of such equipment. As an indication of the reasonable first cost of such an installation, it may be pointed out that all the cable and controls necessary for four 6' x 3' frames can be purchased for $20 or less.

Operating costs vary widely with the type and construction of the hotbed, its insulation and exposure, and many other factors. However, when outside temperatures average around freezing, it will require from 1½ to 2½ kw.-hr. per frame per day to maintain the bed at 60 degrees. At the three-cent rate (a lower one often is available), this amounts to from $1.35 to $2.25 per frame per month, with the average over the entire heating season approaching the lower figure.
